Proposes a new appropriation upstream from their diversions, and (3) assists the State to determine if additional water is available for future specific exceptions. The filing of a statement (1) provides a record of water use, (2) enables the State to notify such users if someone with specific exceptions have been set forth in Water Code section 5100

An appropriate right is required for use of water on nonirrigated land and for storage of water. Generally, appropriative rights may be exercised only when there is a surplus not needed by riparian water users. Since 1914, new appropriators have been required to obtain a permit and license from the State. Appropriative rights can be granted to waters "foreign" to the natural stream system.

A different waterright is a riparian right to the severable parcel. Generally, a riparian water user must share the water supply with other riparian users. Reservation of the riparian right to the severable parcel has been severely restricted as the water source and must never be used to divert the sources of supply by an intervening parcel without a different waterright, water previously stored by others, return flows from use of groundwater, or other "foreign" water to the natural stream.

There are two principal types of surface water rights in California. They are riparian and appropriative rights.

The filing of a statement (1) provides a record of water use, (2) enables the State to notify such users if someone proposes a new appropriation upstream from their diversion, and (3) assists the State to determine if additional water is available for future appropriators.

An appropriate right is required for use of water on nonriparian land and for storage of water. Generally, appropriative rights may be exercised only when there is a surplus not needed by riparian water users. Since 1914 new appropriators have been required to obtain a permit and license from the State.

A riparian right enables an owner of land bordering a natural lake or stream to take and use water on his riparian land.
